Mia's Ghost

By Guy Belleranti

"Mia, there's a ghost in your room,"
Annie whispered.

"No there isn't," Mia said.

"Then what's making that noise?"
Annie asked.

"Do you mean this noise?" Mia asked,
moving her door slowly.

Creak.

"No," Annie said. "That's just a squeaky door."

"Do you mean the noise by my window?" Mia asked.

Wooo-oooo-oooo.

"No," Annie said. "That's just the wind."

"Then what noise do you mean?"

Annie pointed at Mia's closet. "The noise in there."

Bump. Thump. Bump, bump, thump.

Mia frowned. She slowly slid open the door.

Bump, thump—

"Eeeek!" cried both girls. They jumped back as a big pile of toys tumbled down.

"Whew!" said Annie. "At least it wasn't a ghost."

"I wish it was," said Mia. "A ghost could help me clean up the mess!"
